

One person, a whole family.

Here's how to set up a sign-up where someone registers herself and her daughters, and each of them picks their own workshop.

- 1 Open your event. Under Capacity & deadlines, set Guests per sign-up to 6.
This is what lets one person sign up more than themselves.
- 2 Go down to Registration Form Fields and click Add Field.
- 3 Label it Workshop. For the type, choose Multiple Choice.
- 4 Click Add option for each workshop, and put how many people it holds in the Limit box next to it.
Leave a limit empty if that one has no cap.
- 5 Tick Required, then tick Per person.
"Per person" is the important one. It asks each family member separately instead of once for the whole booking.
- 6 For the under-21 question, add a second field the same way: label it Age group, add the options 21 and over and Under 21, and tick Per person.
- 7 Under Confirmation email, type your payment instructions. Paste your giving page address straight in and it becomes a link in the email.
- 8 Update the event, then try it yourself: open the sign-up page, set the number of attendees to 3, and check you're asked for a workshop and an age group for each person.

A few things worth knowing

A workshop that reaches its limit shows Full and can't be chosen. Everyone else sees how many spots are left.

To see who chose what, go to Registrations and click a name. You'll see each person on that booking with their answers.

Answers can now be un-picked. There's a Clear selection link under any optional question, so nobody gets stuck with a wrong tap.

One person can sign up 25 people at most. Beyond that they'd register the rest separately.
